The Dutch Social Enterprise quality label is only awarded to companies that can prove in an independent audit that they are structurally committed to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). These Sustainable Development Goals provide a shared blueprint for peace and prosperity for people and the planet, now and in the future. The 17 SDGs of the United Nations are an urgent call for action for all countries. "In order to receive our Dutch quality label, companies have to show us in detail that they are truly making an effort and that corporate social responsibility is integrated into every part of their business strategy," says André Visser, director of the quality label.

The goal of Mondial Movers is to execute five of the 17 SDGs: no poverty, good health and well-being, decent work and economic growth, reduced inequalities, and climate action.

For example, the Dutch organization is making an effort to provide opportunities for people who are unemployed. Mondial Movers also has its own educational program for young people who are having difficulties obtaining a diploma.

On the other hand, when it comes to taking care of the environment, Mondial Movers has invested for years in growing their fleet of electric moving trucks. "We are more than just a moving organization; corporate social responsibility is in our DNA and the quality label is an acknowledgement of our effort," said general director of Mondial Movers, Marcel de Waal.
